NUTRITIVE EXTRACT OF MEAT.

THIS liquid preparation is the only extract of meat that should be given to invalids. Being a liquid, and containing no enclosed air, it is perfectly free from that mawkish flavour which characterizes the solid commercial article made in South America. The meat from which it is made is subjected to the most rigid personal inspection in our Laboratory while being cut up, is then reduced to pulp by machinery, boiled repeatedly, and the resulting juice after being rendered transluscent by filtration is evaporated by steam till a concentrated extract is obtained. In this form it is a pure solution of the soluble principles of Meat, and possesses a sustaining and a soothing effect upon the sick, far exceeding that of any other preparation.

It's absolute purity is guaranteed.

Per Phial Re. 1, Rs. 2 and Rs. 4.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

SATURDAY EVENING, JAN. 28.

THE Indian and French Bourse has apparently reacted strongly upon the London Stock Exchange, and the speculation and high prices of stocks in both places seem to have received a severe shock. The fortnightly settlement had resulted in many defaults and failures in Capel Court.

Rupee Paper does not seem to have been affected, however, and our market for it here has again been very firm, and sales are reported at 100⅞ for 4 per cents.

Other shares, notwithstanding the continued dearness and scarcity of money, are well maintained in value. The weaker holders have now, to a considerable extent, been winnowed out, and the rates which we quote for most concerns are such, it is thought, as will make them good permanent investments. An improvement has further been established in the shares of several, of which we may mention Rs. 25 in Fort Press and Rs. 10 in Apollo Press, and a few Spinning Mills have gone up Rs. 5 to Rs. 10 per share.

COTTON.—The Liverpool market closed firm, b sales only 8,000 Bales. New York advices little altered. The large quantity of Surats now "visible" in Europe, and the large quantities of the new crop coming forward so early, makes the sale of it to arrive more difficult, except in a brisk general market. Consequently the demand here is not active, and buyers will not pay the higher rates asked by sellers. A little business has been done at an advance of Rs. 1 to Rs. 2 on our lowest quotations of a few days ago, but it is not general. We have heard of a sale of Good Broach, for early February delivery at Rs. 228, which is a high price, but the first arrival of these good New Cotton command a fancy price in Liverpool.

For March delivery the price for the same is Rs. 226 and for April 224.

Oomras we quote:—Good, Rs. 194, and Fully Good Fair, Rs. 182; and there have been sales to-day at these rates.

Hingunghaut has been sold at the old price viz. Rs. 214, but the quality offering is not very good, and is very bare classification.

The week in Liverpool had been a quiet one on the whole, total sales only 49,000 bales, and the advices of the Trade, including forwarded, 54,000 Bales, which reflects, no doubt, the pause in buying which has taken place in the Manchester market. Our comparative statement of stocks, &c., is as follows:—

	1882.	1881.	1880.
Total Stock in Liverpool	621,000	865,000	251,000
Do. of Surats	56,000	31,000	18,000
Total visible supply	3,120,000	2,830,000	2,270,000

Do. Fair Dholleras	4⅞	5	5 13-16

The Bombay Gazette
MONDAY, JANUARY 30, 1882.

It has been our task to wade through the reports on the revision of the Land Revenue in several villages situate in the north of the Nagar District. Fifty of them lie in the Sangamner Taluka, and like others they seem to have suffered from an oppressive land-tax before 1848, which exhibited the usual delusive prospect of a large nominal revenue and a small actual collection; for although the average demand was about 18 annas the acre, the actual collection was only 10 in most of these villages. They were revised in 1848 under the influence of the Wingate-school of reformers, and the tax was at once reduced to 9 annas and 6 annas the acre, or a half to one-third of the former demand. With the usual result that the [illegible] was collected without trouble. [illegible] habit of giving remissions [illegible]. The Government of the day [illegible] resolved not to live in a fool's paradise and faced its difficulties honestly, while the active prosecution of public works which was forced on the Government by outside criticism had its full effect in raising prices by the great influx of capital and the demand for produce for the support of a growing non-agricultural population. Wingate's reforms were peculiar, in so far that he saw more clearly than any one else of the day, that it was necessary in dealing with a pauper peasantry to give every advantage to the peasant. The fields should be small to suit his means: he was not to be charged a premium for taking up land, or a fine for leaving it. He might resign it at any time; the rent was to be collected after he had sold his produce where he had money to pay it with; and, above all, the rent was to be moderate to leave enough for the ryot to live and thrive upon. He did not invent the ryotwari system, but he made the most of it. The system was indigenous; but given the system, he pointed out emphatically the conditions on which it would succeed. It is admirably adapted to succeed in thriving times, and Sangamner was no exception to the general rule. Comparing the present with the past, we have now only 1,200 acres of unoccupied land against 22,000 acres; a population of 20,000 against 46,000; two-thirds of the houses are tiled instead of only one-half; ploughs have increased—for every 4 there are now 5; and carts have increased from 390 to 870. All these are apparent indications of agricultural prosperity. On the other hand, cattle have not increased, and as it is of little use to have carts and ploughs without cattle, Mr. King, the Collector, explains that there might have been great losses in the famine which the people have not been able to replace, and candidly admits that if his explanation is not correct, then the want of increase in live-stock does not indicate any increase in the prosperity of the people, but the reverse. During the past 30 years a road has been made from Poona to Nasik through this district. It does good so far as it opens a new market for surplus produce; but inasmuch as the ryot has to pay cess on [illegible] in addition to the cost of production, and should be added to his assessment as well as the 6¼ per cent. which he pays as Local Funds. The ryot, in fact, is taxed to build a road, and is then charged a toll for using it. Population has increased, but this in itself is not an indication of agricultural prosperity. It merely shows that the natural increase of population in 30 years, in a time of peace, has been able to occupy the waste land without pressing upon the old lands. An acre of land does not produce more now than it did before, and increased food for the people has been obtained by increasing the cultivation. But as the figures show that there are now 1½ acres cultivated to each person, against 2½ before, it is probable that the increase is cultivated for the purpose of export.

It is obvious that the moderation of Government in reducing the tax in 1848 to an all round rate of about seven annas an acre has had its reward in the punctuality with which the revenue has been paid and in the extension of cultivation; so that, excepting a small fraction, the whole of the waste land is now under the plough. And this has occurred although the tax has been increased by the tolls and by 6¼ per cent. for Local Funds. It is the peculiarity and the advantage of the ryot-wari settlement that its success is immediately reflected in an increase of the revenue and is not postponed to the close of it, as in settlements in other parts of India. The success, therefore, of the rate imposed has been proved in practice, and is reflected both in the revenue and in the condition of the people. This being so, and recollecting that a 10 anna rate had failed before, it is with some surprise that we see Government about to impose a rate by which the tax in one village will be increased 70 per cent., in another 50 per cent., and in others somewhat lower. This is in fact, to undo the good which has been done. Under the genial influence of light rates the people have progressed a little; but not nearly so much as the charges of the past 30 years gave reason to hope that they would do. Money has been lavished in public works, and there has been an enormous rise in prices, yet the effect only shows a moderate increase in property and a moderate rise in the standard of comfort. In our opinion continued moderation would have secured the trifling advance already made. The policy of public works is a two-edged sword; at one time it may be of great advantage to a particular district, and at another the cultivators may have reason to curse instead of to bless. They can only sell what they do not eat, and in bad seasons, which are the unhappy rule in the Deccan, the surplus must be small indeed. Hitherto a local scarcity inflated local prices, and it is extraordinary to read the differences in prices between the markets in Sangamner and the markets of Kopergaon and Sinar not many miles distant. But these great variations will not now recur. The railway which skirts this district, and the roads which intersect it make this impossible and the stricken ryot who in old days was able to pay his tax with the remnant of his crop, because the price he obtained for that remnant was abnormally high, now finds cheap grain pouring in at the first whisper of scarcity, and his remnant does not fetch anything like the price it used to do. On the other hand in good years, and they are few, he commands a wider market. He continues to sell at the village bazaar, but the dealers who buy tend to pay him more. However, it is clear that in bad years his position is much worse than it was before, and poor as he is and without capital, it will require many good years to repair the harm done by a bad one. Bad seasons will now only mean disaster to the ryot. Formerly high prices compensated him for a short crop; now he has to look for a short crop and low prices. We are not unmindful of the benefit to the consumer, but what we regard, and what the Government ought to regard, is the effect of cheap transit upon the local producer; and we take it that, as bad seasons are the rule and good seasons the exception in this part of the country, the effect of the railway is not to benefit the cultivator, however much it may benefit the consumer. It merely exposes him to be swamped by the cheaper and more prolific harvests of more favored situations, just as the English farmer is sorely pressed with the competition of the abundant harvests of Canada and the States. We do not refer to famines when cultivators and non-cultivators alike are thankful for cheap grain, but to normal seasons and normal effects.

Not only do Government propose to increase the revenue from Rs. 36,000 to Rs. 56,000 including Local Funds and Tolls, but the way in which they have gone about it does not commend itself to our sense of fairness. From the days of the Mussalman kings, and probably before them, the ancient practice in measuring a field has always been to allow a liberal margin. A field of 10 biggas, for instance, would be considered and taxed as 9. The survey of 30 years ago evidently did not venture to change this custom materially, and hence the recent survey, while calling itself scientific and accurate, is in reality doing nothing more than taking credit for every square inch of ground upon which it can fasten a rent. It is, in fact, a ruthless revolution of a time-honored custom. The effect is to bring 9,000 acres under taxation in these fifty villages alone which were not subject to taxation before. The people had the enjoyment and the benefit of this land free from tax, but under the new survey the whole is be taxed. Not only is the rent for the old area to be raised by one-third, but the old margin, hitherto held free, is to be subject to the full tax. Hitherto the produce of this land must have been subject in great measure to pay the old rent, but now this reserve has been taken from the cultivator who must pay a full rent on the full area of his field. We can hardly conceive a measure more prejudicial to the interests of Government than this. The superintendent thinks the land was at first really unarable but has been brought under the plough by persevering tillage, if so, it should not be taxed at all as an improvement solely due to the [illegible] energy of the occupants, but if the major part of it was knowingly allowed as a margin in accordance with ancient custom, then, if it is to be taxed at all, it should be done with extreme moderation and at exceptional rates. We need not say how we should like to see the question settled.

We have alluded above to the remark of Mr. King that, as cattle had not increased in 30 years, it was not a healthy sign, especially when coupled with the facts that cultivation had nearly doubled and irrigation had increased, and that there were two carts and two ploughs for every one formerly. Colonel Anderson rather noisily protests against this view, and points out that the figures show that each pair of bullocks works 25 acres (it should be 25), which he asserts is very moderate and the number fully sufficient for the field work, and he accounts for the non-increase by saying that the cart traffic has run pack-bullocks off the road. The Commissioner, Mr. Robertson, chimes in with the original remark that the figures might be wrong—that many animals might have been absent—and querulously complains that meat is dear and the beasts are sold for butchers' meat. We do not expect much, but we have a right to expect that high-salaried officials should express opinions worthy of their pay, and these silly observations might well have been spared. The question is whether it is a sign of agricultural prosperity that cattle have not increased in 30 years. The answer is it is not, and it is rank nonsense to think otherwise. Live stock is one of the commonest indications of agricultural prosperity all the world over, and Sangamner is no exception. Compare the figures with neighbouring villages. In a few villages in Kopargaon, a few miles off, the number of cattle has increased by 110 per cent. in the very same period in which there has been no increase in Sangamner. Both tracks suffered from the famine—Kopargaon even worse than Sangamner—and numbers of cattle perished; but in Kopargaon the stock has been replaced, and in Sangamner, although there is lots of pasture in the hills, the loss is still apparent. Why? simply because the men have not got the money to buy others. Kopargaon is flat and carts are used, yet cattle have increased; Sangamner is hilly, and in most parts pack-bullocks must be used instead of carts, yet cattle have decreased. To assert that carts cause a decrease in bullocks is nonsense. There is no fallacy in Mr. King's reasoning. The [illegible] considering that Colonel Anderson's and Mr. Robertson's premises support their conclusions. There may be an intimate connection between dear meat, the extent of the kharif crop, the profits of cart-men, and deficiency of cattle which may be revealed to Mr. Robertson, but it is unknown to us.

We have just learnt that the Secretary of State has suspended the orders of the Bombay Government increasing the Land Revenue in these Districts. We trust that the order will be made absolute. We are probably at the beginning of a period of comparatively low prices, and we think it highly injudicious to imperil the little progress which has been made. The standard of comfort among this patient and laborious class has been raised a little, and we should hesitate to destroy it without stronger recommendations than the survey which has just been made, and the opinion by which it is backed.

ONE of our Allahabad contemporaries was led, in an evil moment, to infer from the facts of the Fisher case that, in the estimation of the natives of this country, the members of the Civil Service were, as a rule, monsters of corruption. The natives of India, argued our contemporary are incapable of conceiving how a man having the power to extort bribes can refrain from using it: their estimate of the present is naturally coloured by the experience of their own miserable and immoral past. The Statesman retorts that the natives distrust only the Pahari, whose villainy varies directly as the laxity of their English superiors. Hereupon "Truth" writes to the Statesman a letter, in which he asserts that the North-West civilians are habitually guilty of practices which the natives might be excused for stigmatising as corrupt. The Statesman instead of rejoicing over the probable unearthing of a great scandal, professes incredulity and pity: we have no such naughty boys here in Bengal, and we can hardly believe that the North-West is more vicious than its neighbours. We fancy the whole gist of the matter is given in a letter which Mr. O'Donnell, the Bengal hero of the day, has lately written to the provincial Secretary, in explanation of a veiled charge made against Mr. O'Donnell himself by that official. Mr. O'Donnell was accused of having improperly "dismissed complaints of oppression by the ryots of Chanchra against the manager of the estate, with whom Mr. O'Donnell was then living." We are not concerned with Mr. O'Donnell's direct explanation, which on the face of it seems sufficiently complete, but rather with his tu quoque assault upon the "gross suggestion" in the reference to his living at the time with the manager, Mr. Stevens. "Is it not the fact," he asks, "that the brother of the Commissioner of Patna is Secretary to the Maharajah of Durbungha, and receives a handsome salary from that nobleman? But does that circumstance prevent Mr. Halliday from reporting very favourably in regard to the management of his estates? Is it not the fact that scores of the magistrates in Bengal reside in houses owned by the chief landed proprietors of their districts? At

OPENING OF THE CALCUTTA TELEPHONE EXCHANGE.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

CALCUTTA, JAN. 29.

The Calcutta Telephone Exchange was opened on Saturday afternoon by Major the Hon'ble Evelyn Baring, in the absence of the Hon'ble Mrs. Baring, owing to indisposition. The Government of India was further represented by Hon. Mr. Gibbs and General Fraser, while all classes of the community were represented at the ceremony. The Central Office was successively connected with the Englishman Press, Carlisle, Nephews, Spence's Hotel, Great Eastern Hotel, and several other offices and tested with perfect success. After those present had satisfied their curiosity, Mr. Leggett, agent of the Company, in a brief speech thanked Major Baring for having undertaken the ceremony of declaring the Exchange open, and expressed regret that Mrs. Baring, who was to have performed the ceremony, had from illness unavoidably been prevented from being present. Major Baring replying said he believed that an impression prevailed that there had been some tardiness on the part of Government in coming to an arrangement with the Telephone Company. He should like it to be known, however, that there never had existed material objections. The difficulties, although troublesome, were purely technical and of a legal character. He believed the Oriental Telephone Company would find plenty of work in India, for the value of the Telephone was undoubted. In wishing success to the Telephone Company, he declared the Calcutta Exchange open. Telegrams were also despatched to Bombay and Madras declaring those Exchanges also opened. The number of subscribers up to date is about 90, some 25 were already in connection. It is intended, as the operations gradually extend, to establish a branch of Exchange in the river bank for the convenience of the shipping, and in several of the suburbs, and eventually to open the Exchange system whereby any person in any station in a district will be able to speak to any other district on payment of a small fee.

According to the Committee's scheme, a European school, in order to be ranked as an upper primary school—and to be aided accordingly—must teach, in addition to reading, writing, and arithmetic, at least two class subjects of which English shall be one. To be ranked as a middle school, it must teach, in addition to the three "3 R's" at least four class subjects including English, Geography and History. Lastly, for a European school to be classed as a high school, it must teach up to the "Entrance Standard" of the Calcutta University.

THE Anjuman-i-Punjab:—"The friends of Muhammad Hayat Khan, C.S.I., state that he will take the opportunity of the collapse of his case to urge on Government the fulfilment of a promise alleged to have been made to him by General Sir F. Roberts of a Jaghir of Rs. 60,000 a year for his services in Kabul." Supposing the alleged promise to have been made, it should need a more complete refutation of the charges against Hayat Khan than is implied by a break-down of the case through the impossibility of inducing witnesses to come to India from Kabul to establish his claim to its fulfilment.

THE statement made by a Madras paper to the effect that a man-of-war had been ordered to Rangoon, as a precautionary measure, is, the Pioneer is enabled to state, founded on an entire misconception of the facts. All that has occurred is this:—the Government of India have drawn the attention of Admiral Sir George Jones, Commanding in the East Indian Station, to the fact that the war vessel which is usually supposed to be stationed in Rangoon waters was no longer there, and have suggested that a vessel should be sent forthwith. This suggestion the Admiral has accepted, and Rangoon will have, or probably by this time has, a man-of-war in its harbour. The Government of India can not issue orders to the Admiral Commanding; it can only make suggestions, that officer taking his order from the Admiralty at home.

THE action of the Vaccination Department in prosecuting Mr. Kemp for neglecting to produce his child on or before the eighth day after vaccination for inspection, has resulted in a useful amendment of the Vaccination Act. The reason why Mr. Kemp set at nought the vaccination officers and refused to comply with their demand to produce his child at the vaccination office, by the eighth day after the operation had been performed, was that the child was too ill to be taken out. Mr. Kemp produced a doctor's certificate to the effect that his child was not in a fit state to be taken to the public vaccination office; but that did not satisfy the native chief vaccinator, who stuck out for the fulfilment of the letter of the law, and summoned Mr. Kemp to the Police Court. The Magistrate put a more intelligent interpretation on the section, and decided that the presentation of a medical certificate was sufficient. And now Government have seen fit, in order to avoid similar vexatious proceedings by over-zealous vaccination officers in future, to amend the Act, and a short Bill has been drafted to effect the substitution of the words "any earlier or later day" for the words "an earlier day" in section VIII. The "Statement of Objects and Reasons" explains that it has been found in practice that in the case of a person who may have a reasonable excuse, such as illness of the child or other unavoidable cause, for not producing a child for inspection on the eighth day after vaccination or on some earlier day appointed for the purpose, there is no provision of the law under which such person may be required to produce the child for inspection after the eighth day; consequently in many cases the result of the operation will never be ascertained and the proper working of the Vaccination Law will be impaired. It is proposed, therefore, to remedy this defect, and to render it possible for the public vaccinator or medical practitioner to appoint any earlier or later day than the eighth for the inspection of a child he has vaccinated.

THE recent prosecution of Madras dhobies on a charge of rash and negligent conduct in washing clothes in a room where a person lay dead of cholera, raises speculation as to the curious fact that Europeans in the large towns of India have not before this thrown over the dhobies altogether, and established steam laundries. Beyond the uncertainty which always exists, as to whether the dhoby does not wash and iron one's clothes in some wretched quarter where they are exposed to infection with cholera, small-pox, or some other of the terrible diseases which are always more or less prevalent in the over-crowded and ill-drained and worse ventilated slums of an Indian city, there is the consideration of the sad havoc they make of collars, cuffs, &c., which of itself ought long since to have put an end, to the dhobies' trade as at present practised. There was an attempt made at starting a steam laundry in Bombay, and in Calcutta also, we believe, but in neither case was the scheme given a fair chance. Started fairly, with the capital necessary to procure suitable machinery, and worked judiciously, such an enterprise in any of the large Indian cities could not fail to be as great a commercial success as it would be an undoubted boon to the general public.

IT is impossible to conceive how the cause of Christianity in India can be advanced, or what moral or religious benefit can result to any one, from certain recent actions of well-meaning, but perhaps over-zealous and certainly injudicious, persons engaged in missionary work. It is not long since very just complaints were made in Calcutta of placards being posted about the streets, abusing the Hindu religion. More recently we have had a good deal of declamation and a considerable amount of abuse of certain persons and their professions from Mr. Joseph Cook and his supporters, resulting in an unseemly controversy, and in such unedifying scenes as occurred at the Poona meeting the other day, when a reverend gentleman somewhat needlessly quoted the saying about casting pearls before swine, to the annoyance of more than the native members of his audience. And now it is reported from Allahabad that during the recent great religious gathering of natives there, some missionaries, in their misguided enthusiasm, set up a stall in the fair for the sale of books attacking native religions, and even "palmed off the books on unwary purchasers who believed them orthodox Indian books." A local paper hears "on unimpeachable testimony" that "in one case, when an indignant purchaser thus imposed upon, tore up the book before the crowd, indignantly protesting that publications of that sort were not wanted at the Mela, the offended missionary hauled him off to the police-station and wanted to have him punished." The magistrate of course refused to listen to the complaint.

THE Select Committee to which the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure was referred, report that they have made in the Bill only three important amendments:—First, they think that the present law gives too great latitude to the Courts with regard to the examination of an accused person. It was never intended that the Court should examine the accused with a view to elicit from him some statement which would lead to his conviction. They have therefore limited the power of interrogating the accused by adding to the first paragraph of section 342 the words "for the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him." They think the accused should always have this opportunity of explaining, and they have therefore required the Court to question him generally for that purpose before he enters on his defence. Next, they have amended the law as to whipping, and have provided, in section 32, that no Magistrate of the second class shall pass a sentence of whipping unless specially empowered in that behalf by the Local Government. They have also provided, in section 391, that whipping shall be inflicted with a light rattan not less than half an inch in diameter, and have abolished whipping with a cat-of-nine-tails. They have further prohibited the infliction of whipping on any person whom the Court considers to be more than 45 years of age. Thirdly, being of opinion that it is unnecessary and inexpedient to retain in section 423 the power which Appellate Courts have at present of enhancing sentences on appeals presented by convicted persons they have accordingly withdrawn it.

THE Englishman takes a very sensible view of the Rajputana Railway rates question. "There can be no question," our contemporary writes, "that the commercial public of Bombay, in the view they take of the questions raised by the growing competition between that port and Calcutta for the trade of the remote North-West, have reason as well as interest on their side. So far as it interferes at all in providing or controlling communications, it is obviously the duty of Government to assist nature, as far as practicable, by facilitating the adoption of the most direct routes. Cases may no doubt exist where, owing to physical obstacles or other causes, the process would be so costly that an indirect route would be ultimately the most economical. But wherever this is not the case, no regard for merely local interests would justify an attempt to handicap the direct route by artificial hindrances. And this cannot be the case where the question that arises concerns, not the construction of new means of communication, but the conditions under which actually existing means shall be used. Such is the question that is now being discussed in connection with the Rajputana line of railway. The railway is made, and the point at issue is the terms on which the public shall be allowed to use it. However grievous it may be to the sufferers to see old trade passing into new channels, and whatever temporary injury to particular interests may attend the transition, it is impossible, viewing the matter from the impartial standpoint of the public good, to justify any measure that would tend to deprive trade of the full advantage of the new route. Calcutta has its remedy—and we doubt not it will prove an ample one—in concentrating its energies on the improvement and cheapening of its own port, on the development of trade which naturally and permanently belongs to it, and on the opening out of communications with districts for which it is the nearest and most convenient emporium. The region within which Calcutta is secure against all possibility of competition is sufficiently vast to guarantee her the permanent retention of her present position as the commercial capital of India, and in spite of any accession of business which the opening of the Rajputana line of railway may give her rival, the progress of her trade in the near future is probably destined far to outstrip that of Bombay."

THE CAMP OF EXERCISE AT POONA.

THE following circular has been issued from the Adjutant-General's office, Poona, dated the 13th January 1882:—

For the performance of the Field Firing and the Musketry Inspection to be made this year by General Officers Commanding Divisions and Brigades, all available troops are at each Station in the Presidency will move into camp for a period of about 10 days.

A suitable position, situated within one day's march of Cantonments, having been selected, the following programme will, so far as practicable, be adhered to:—

1st Day.—March to Camp.

2nd, 3rd, 4th Days.—Entrenching and preparing the position in accordance with the nature of the ground, &c.—That portion of the Troops not employed on fatigue duties to practise "attack and defence" on ground in the vicinity other than that to be used for field firing. Blank ammunition may be used during this preliminary drill at the discretion of Officers Commanding.

5th Day.—The British Regiments of the Force will expend the 2,000 rounds specially sanctioned for long range experimental firing by clause 90, India Army Circulars, dated May 1881, by marksmen opening fire on the position from between 600 and 1,400 yards; the remainder of the troops inconveying comfortably.

6th Day.—First stage, Field Firing; Martini-Henry rifles from 1,000 yards, Snider Rifles from 1,000 yards to about 600 yards.

A flanking fire, even at considerable ranges, may serve very effectually to cover an attack in which the marksmen are engaged; take no active part beyond contributing to its success by stationary fire.

When such a position is available, it should be used for such a purpose, and its object clearly explained by the officer in charge to the men so employed.

When this expedient is adopted, its effect will be most fairly judged by the active attack confining itself to the use of blank ammunition, the direction of the marksmen's fire being such as to cover the advance up to the latest moment of safety. As this practice depends so clearly upon the ground and troops that are available, it is suggested, but is not imperative, should it be practised the one of its effect, with the ... ... are (5th day) 1st stage, would be interesting.

8th Day.—Second stage field firing from 600 to 200 yards.

9th Day.—Third stage field firing from 400 to 200 yards.

10th Day.—General Officers' Musketry Inspection; a section of 16 men per company firing 10 rounds as per "Squad Trial Stakes," under the conditions detailed in the programme of the ninth Central Rifle Meeting held at Poona in 1881.

THE BOMBAY-BURMAH TRADING CORPORATION.

IN THE MATTER OF THE INDIAN COMPANIES ACT X. OF 1866 AND THE BOMBAY-BURMAH TRADING CORPORATION.

MR. JARDINE, instructed by Messrs. Craigie, Lynch and Owen, appeared in support of the Petition of the Company. Messrs. J. A. Bryce, H. A. Richardson and M. R. Wyse; Mr. Inverarity, instructed by Messrs. Janardhan and Hormusjee, appeared for Mr. Nusserwanjee Manockjee Petit and other dissentient shareholders holding in the aggregate more than 100 shares. Mr. Hormusjee, of Messrs. Ardaser and Hormusjee, appeared for Mr. Jehangir Cowasjee Jehangir, a dissentient shareholder. The question before his Lordship was whether the notice received from Mr. Inverarity's clients, requiring the Registrar to abstain from carrying into effect the resolutions passed for winding up the Company and forming a new one, was valid or otherwise under the provisions of section 175 of the Act. It was understood that if the notice was held valid, the resolutions would be void.

Mr. Inverarity continued his argument of the previous day that, as the winding-up had not proceeded under section 175, the resolutions passed by a majority alone was sufficient to dispose of the resolutions. The learned counsel raised several objections, which he contended were fatal to the resolutions, because they departed from the provisions of the Act. The Company had tried to reconstruct itself in a manner not allowed by law; it was not an arrangement such as was contemplated under section 175; and there was no notice given to the shareholders as was required under the provisions of the section.

Mr. Jardine contended that, according to the decision of the Master of the Rolls, in the case cited, the requisition ought to have given the liquidators the alternative of purchasing the shares when requiring them to abstain from carrying into effect the resolutions into effect. It was indispensably necessary that the notice should give the liquidators the option of purchasing the shares.

The Judge.—The option was given by the resolutions.

Mr. Jardine.—But the shareholders might say I don't want to sell my shares: I simply asked you to abstain from carrying the resolutions into effect.

The Judge remarked that when the shareholders said "abstain," they were to be understood to mean that otherwise the consequences would follow.

Some discussion ensued as to the effect of the decision of the Master of the Rolls whether the option was indispensably necessary or not.

Mr. Jardine cited some authorities and contended that, for not giving the option, the requisition was invalid. The learned counsel argued that the validity of the transfer of the assets of the old to the new Company, or the question of the amalgamation, could not be decided on this petition. It must be done by a suit.

Mr. Inverarity submitted that the liquidation having been put a stop to, there was no object to be gained by a suit. If the question could be disposed of now, both time and money would be saved.

His Lordship took time to consider his decision.

(Before the Hon'ble Mr. Justice WEST.)

THE MATRIMONIAL SUITS.

ANNIE HEMINGWAY vs. JOSEPH HEMINGWAY AND JOSEPH HEMINGWAY vs. ANNIE HEMINGWAY, alias ANNIE POWAR.

THIS is a suit and a cross-suit. Mr. Latham and Mr. Sadashew Nana, instructed by Messrs. Chalk and Walker, appeared for Annie Hemingway, who is the petitioner in the first suit and respondent in the second; and Mr. Lang and Mr. Rivett-Carnac instructed by Messrs. Hearn, Cleveland and Little, appeared for Mr. Joseph Hemingway, the respondent in the first suit and the petitioner in the second.

Mr. Rivett-Carnac continued his address on behalf of the petitioner (Mr. Hemingway). He went upon the admissions made by Mrs. Hemingway in her evidence as tending to support the petitioner's case. He remarked that the necklace worn by the respondent, when she was at the works at Waree-bunder, was removed by her brother-in-law Mathura, to delude the work-people into the belief that her husband was dead. The learned counsel contended that the respondent's evidence was not generally entitled to credit, because being well aware of the terrible loss she would suffer if the court pronounced a decree of nullity of marriage, she tried every means to uphold her case. Mr. Carnac also laid stress upon the fact that Mrs. Hemingway could give no direct evidence as to the death of her first husband, Duttoo; and pointed out the contradictions in the evidence of the same and different witnesses on behalf of the respondent.

After Mr. Carnac had finished his address, His Lordship intimated that he would give judgment on Tuesday or Thursday next.
